One little bit of family legend – true or not – is that Albert Donaghy, my grandfather (Brandy's great grandfather) worked for a die casting company in Philadelphia – I am not sure of the name, Stoke's perhaps – and worked on the machine that made the first lifesavers!

As mentioned, thanks very much for these. 2 of these are new to me and have new information I didn't have elsewhere. I'll process these and add them to my site once I am done with the packet from Leslie...

Thanks much, and if you do come across more, I'd love to see it!

I know Leslie had mentioned to Brandy contacting a couple other relatives for more information, not sure if it is Howard's wife or someone else.

I have attached five jpegs of documents that might be of help. I thought I had more – but I might come across something as I go through my attic before leaving for Honduras in early June.

Most of the genealogy work was done by my uncle Howard – a brother of Leonard. His wife, in her early nineties, is still alive and living in Georgia. Leslie might have her phone number or the phone number of her daughter.

I hope this helps. It's great to see someone working on this.

Good luck and let me know what comes from all this.

Jack

Hello John, you don't know me, but I believe my fiance Brandy Donaghy's Great-grandfather Albert Donaghy was also your Grandfather. I've been putting together some Genealogy information for her and compiling it here:

<http://wiki.abulsme.com/Category:BDPedigree>

I'm currently going through a packet of old materials and pictures that Brandy's mother (Leslie May Donaghy, a daughter of Leonard Simon Donaghy who I believe was one of your father's brothers) and am slowly putting that information online linked off the link above. As I add each name I'm trying to search for more information online and I found your bio when searching on "John Slook".

Anyway, just wanted to introduce myself and let you know the pages exist in case you are interested. Going backward in time from:

http://wiki.abulsme.com/Albert\_Donaghy

and

http://wiki.abulsme.com/Mary\_Elizabeth\_Slook

Everyone should be common ancestors, although I don't have much there yet. I hope to get up all the information and pictures from Brandy's mother in the next month or so.

Also, if you happen to have any old family information that might be of interest, I'd love to share and get copies if possible. If not, I understand too.

Brandy just came in the room and mentioned that she thought she heard you had left the country and this Iowa State address wouldn't be any good, but I'll send it anyway just in case, expecting a bounce. She mentioned she'll try to get your "real" contact information from her mother. :-)

In any case, sorry to bother if none of this is of interest, but thanks for reading!
